Social Story for Cycles Family Programs with Tours and Artmaking

I am going to a family art making event at St. Johnsbury Athenaeum. Here I will make art and look at art in the art show called, Cycles.

There is more than one way I can enter the building. Some entrances have stairs and others have ramps.

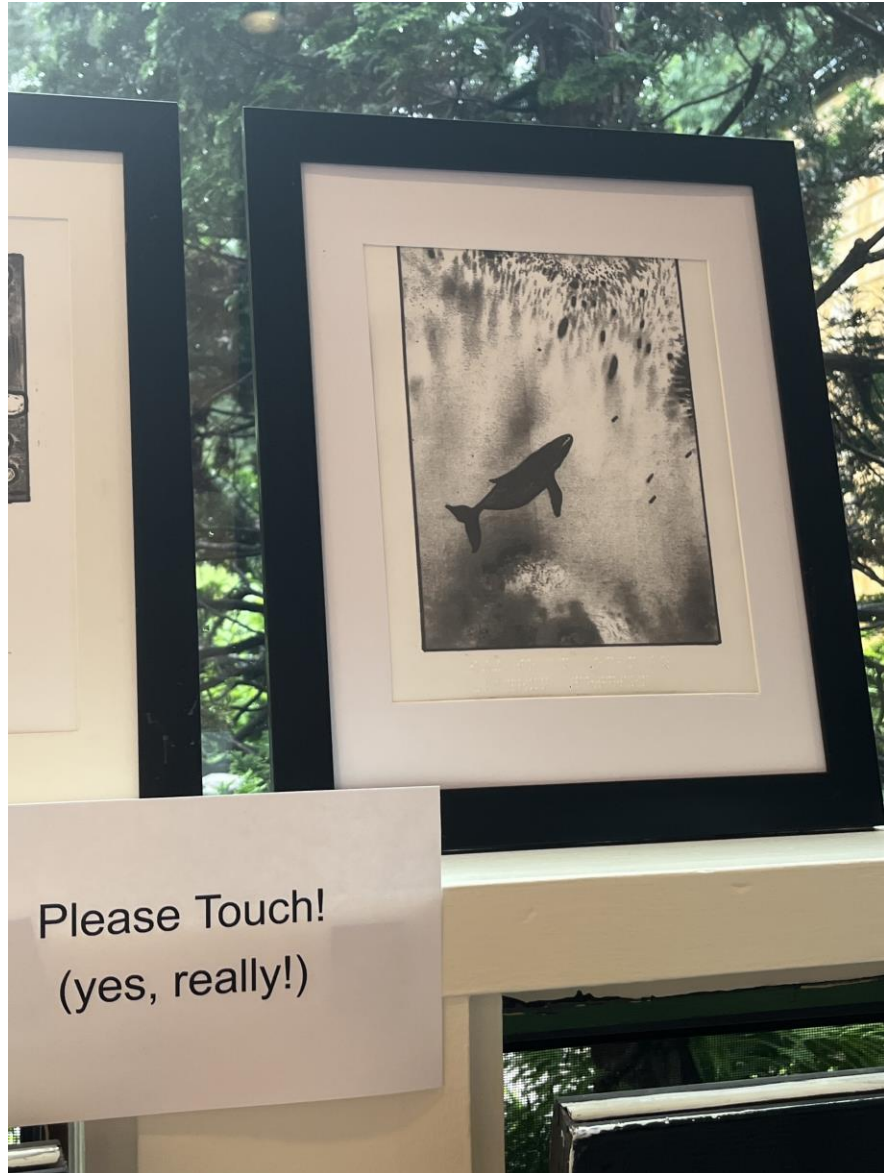

The gallery is on the second floor. I can use the elevator or the stairs to get there.

Once I am on the second floor, I will meet staff from the library and Inclusive Arts Vermont. Becky is one of the people I will meet.

Other families will be at this event. I may meet kids my own age.

There will be framed art by people with disabilities. This art cannot be touched. There will be some things I can touch called tactiles. These items will be labeled or pointed out. I can explore the art by myself and with my family.

The teaching artist will give a tour. I will learn about some of the art. I can ask questions.

Then I will go to a table or on the floor with the group. The teaching artist will guide me through an art activity.

There will be a quiet space I can go to. I can bring my own noise canceling headphones and fidgets if I want. There will be headphones and fidgets if I forget mine.

After the program, I'll be asked about my experience. I can respond at the event or after in an email.

When the event is over, I will take my art home with me and say goodbye to the group.
